'The Collection' At the Aldwych

By Our Dramatic Critic
J. C. TREWIN
Iarold Pinter seems to write plays on telegraph forms. c Collection, at the Aldwych night, was almost a selfcody of his style, a mossicvery brief sentences interseed with heavy pauses, and entire money of the service of the sentence with the commonly little. we can assume, of course, hat it means a lot. Have we ot been told that, in Pinter, we must read between the nes? But no-one is going to ell me that this thin little iece has any kind of real
